

ABSTRACT

5

A rainwater surface drain for use in roof drains comprises a substantially funnel-shaped reservoir for water to be drained and covered with an upper strainer or grating member downstream of which an eddy preventing insert means in the form of a flat grate member is disposed at a short distance upstream of a discharge outlet on the bottom side of the reservoir which is connected with an outlet pipe.

10